Whom did you write in as governor on your ballot?

Brian (@redeyesportsguy): Alexi Galifianakis. Loved his work in "The Hangover."

Ernest (@remixchicago): Clay Davis from "The Wire," if only for his catchphrase.

Kim Z. Dale (@observacious): Mayor Daley. Hopefully he'll lease out the southern part of the state.

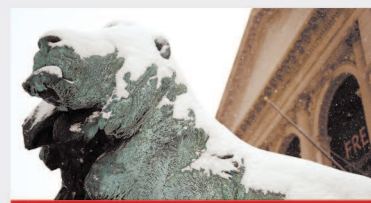

What did you learn from the weekend's D.C. rally?

Brian: There's no replacement for the real comics in D.C.: our elected officials.

Ernest: I'd pay for an Ozzy Osbourne-Yusef Islam duet. "Peace/Crazy Train," anyone?

Ryan Brinkerhoff (@r_vance_b): The middle is still the biggest part of America(ns).

Snow flurries are in the forecast. How are you preparing?

Brian: By growing a pair.

Ernest: Same as prepping for sporting events/family functions: brushing up on my curse words.

Andre Alforque (@alforque): LIES!!!

FINDINGS

Alcohol is a more dangerous drug than both crack and heroin when the combined harms to the user and to others are assessed, British scientists said Monday. Presenting a new scale of drug harm that rates the damage to users themselves and to wider society, the scientists rated alcohol the most harmful overall and almost three times as harmful as cocaine or tobacco. REUTERS

STUDY: ALCOHOL
'MOST HARMFUL' DRUG
OVERALL—FOLLOWED BY CRACK AND HEROIN

CNN

Alcohol ranks "most harmful" among a list of 20 drugs, beating out crack and heroin when assessed for its potential harm to the individual drinking it and harm to others, according to study results released by a British medical journal.

A panel of experts from the Independent Scientific Committee on Drugs weighed the physical, psychological and social problems caused by the drugs and determined that alcohol was the most harmful overall, according to an article on the study released by The Lancet on Sunday.

Using a new scale to evaluate harms to individual users and others, alcohol received a score of 72 on a scale of 1 to 100, the study says. It was compared to 19 other drugs using 16 criteria: nine related to the adverse effects the drug has on an individual and seven on its harm against others.

That makes it almost three times as harmful as cocaine or tobacco, according to the article, which was published on The Lancet's website Monday and in an upcoming print edition of the journal.

Heroin, crack cocaine and methamphetamine were the most harmful drugs to individuals, the study says, while alcohol, heroin and crack cocaine were the most harmful to others.

In the article, the panelists said their findings show that Britain's three-tiered drug classification system, which places drugs into different categories that determine criminal penalties for possession and dealing, has "little relation to the evidence of harm."

Panelists also noted that the rankings confirm other studies that say that "aggressively targeting alcohol harms is a valid and necessary public health strategy."

The Lancet article was co-written by David Nutt, a professor and Britain's former chief drug adviser, who caused controversy last year after he published an article saying ecstasy was not as dangerous as riding a horse.

"So why are harmful sporting activities allowed, whereas relatively less harmful drugs are not?" Nutt wrote in the Journal of Psychopharmacology. "I believe this reflects a societal approach which does not adequately balance the relative risks of drugs against their harms."

Nutt later apologized to anyone offended by the article and to those who have lost loved ones to ecstasy. He said he had no intention of trivializing the dangers of the drug and that he only wanted to compare the risks.

In the article released by The Lancet on Sunday, ecstasy's harmfulness ranking—9—indicates it is only one-eighth as harmful as alcohol.

The study was funded by the London-based Centre for Crime and Justice studies.

Library weighing CTA kiosk idea

CTA stops might eventually resemble electronics stores.

The Chicago Public Library is looking into setting up book and DVD rental machines, similar to Redbox DVD kiosks, in CTA stations, library spokeswoman Ruth Lednicer tells Going Public.

Lednicer said the library is investigating the costs of the machines and how library cards could be used to access the books inside, Lednicer said. The library's interest was first reported last week by the Sun-Times.

"It's really in the stages right now of seeing how feasible it is," Lednicer said. "It's not something you should expect to see in the next few months."

The CTA began a similar program with magazines in July. The agency installed eight magazine vending machines that sell Time, People and Entertainment Weekly, among other titles, as part of a six-month pilot.

The program is set to continue until early February with an option to renew for another six months, CTA spokeswoman Sheila Gregory said.

The CTA said it is guaranteed $500 per month per machine through its deal with the Classic Group, which maintains and repairs the machines.

If the CTA makes this program permanent, GP recommends moving the kiosks to high-traffic locations in the station. The machine at the Belmont stop on the Red, Purple and Brown lines, for example, is in an alcove off the lobby near an obscure exit.

Survey says ...

The Chicago Department of Transportation, in conjunction with the CTA, has distributed more than 61,000 surveys to CTA riders asking them basic questions about their commute.

The survey, which was handed out recently at 32 rail stations, includes questions about how long the rider has been regularly riding the CTA and inquiries about bike and car parking options, among others. The study cost about $155,000, transportation spokesman Brian Steele said.

ELECTION 2010

MIDTERM CHEAT SHEET

OK, people. Election Day is here. After weeks and weeks of relentless campaign ads, the moment has arrived for the candidates to put up or shut up. Want to get involved? Use this guide to navigate the races and find out where to go to cast your vote.

The races for governor and senator have dominated this year's election, with Republicans seeking to take back both offices from the Democrats. Gov. Quinn, who took over when former Gov. Rod Blagojevich was removed from office in January 2009, is up against Republican state Sen. Bill Brady and three other challengers. In the Senate, Roland Burris chose not to run this year after receiving a controversial appointment from Blagojevich to fill President Obama's former Senate seat. The contest between Republican Rep. Mark Kirk and Democratic state Treasurer Alexi Giannoulias (plus two third-party candidates) has attracted national attention. Here's the rundown. TRIBUNE REPORTING

★ U.S. SENATE CANDIDATES ★

D Alexi Giannoulias
Democrat

Supports the stimulus bill and favors smaller, targeted additional expenditures to help the economy. Favors allowing Bush tax cuts to expire for those making more than $250,000.

Supports abortion rights, gay marriage and a ban on semiautomatic firearms.

Supports U.S. troop surge in Afghanistan and a two-state solution for Israel and Palestine. Believes "all options must remain on the table ... to disarm Iran's nuclear program."

Supports targeted changes to the health care law, including requiring insurance companies to provide more price information and allowing federal regulators to sign off on premium increases.

R Mark Kirk
Republican

Voted against the stimulus bill; favors a package targeted at helping small businesses. Supports extending the Bush tax cuts for all.

Supports abortion rights but opposes federal funding of abortion. Supports civil unions and "sensible measures" to curb gun violence.

Supports training of Afghan security forces but says 2011 deadline is unrealistic. Says U.S. must stand by Israel. Supports stricter enforcement of sanctions against Iran.

Voted against the health care bill. Favors a plan that includes tort reform and that would allow Americans to buy health insurance out of state.

G LeAlan M. Jones
Green

Supports a massive overhaul of infrastructure and transportation systems. Favors tax cuts for those making less than $1 million per year and a national gas tax.

Supports gay marriage and a community's right to have conceal-and-carry gun laws.

Supports nationalizing the defense industry to rein in defense spending. Also supports a "single-state solution" for Israel and Palestine and banning nuclear weapons worldwide.

Opposes the health care law. Favors a single-payer health care system.

Libertarian

Opposes stimulus bill and any similar future spending. Supports extending and expanding tax cuts.

Opposes abortion rights. Believes government "should not be in the marriage business." Opposes restrictions on gun ownership and possession.

Supports withdrawal of U.S. troops from Iraq and Afghanistan except those pursuing al-Qaida. Says U.S. should not be involved in Israeli-Palestinian negotiations.

Favors repeal of the health care law and says market forces are the best solution to improving care and lowering costs.

RECALL REFERENDUM

A proposed amendment to the Illinois Constitution would allow voters to recall the governor. But doing so would be extremely difficult. Recall advocates would need signatures from members of the Illinois House and Senate from both major parties and potentially a half-million or so signatures.

Who's rocking the vote?

Survey shows Millennials not expected to hit polls like they did in '08

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Young voters helped usher President Obama into the White House, but what their presence at the polls Tuesday will do for the mid-term elections is anybody's guess.

Typically, voter turnout in general is lower in off-year elections compared with presidential election years, and young adults vote at a lower rate than older adults.

Despite seeing the youth voter turnout increase to 51 percent in the 2008 presidential election, a recent survey of 2,000 Millennials by Harvard's Institute of Politics showed only 27 percent said they "definitely" will vote in the midterms. That's on par with the 26 percent turnout in the 2006 midterm election.

But that 27 percent "definitely" voting is a drop from 31 percent in February and 36 percent in November 2009, suggesting interest is waning.

"I think there's definitely disinterest. I think people are definitely discouraged," said Jerrell Reid, 25, first vice president of the Young Democrats of Illinois. With the election of Obama, many young voters expected immediate changes but instead saw political infighting, said Reid, who lives in West Humboldt Park.

"There may be some naive frustration," said Molly Andolina, assistant professor of political science at DePaul University. "I think a lot of Democratic supporters are frustrated with their party and the president. But that may be especially pronounced among young people who had great expectations and a lot of hope only to see politics up close and the frustration of a president having to deal with Congress."

Republicans have a better outlook.

"We're not just engaged, we're hyper-engaged. We're excited about this election," said Meredyth Richards, president of Chicago Young Republicans. Why? Partly because of the competitive races where there are strong Republican challengers for positions held by Democrats for a long time, she said.

In Illinois, Republicans need to gain 12 seats to run the state House. The governor's race is close between incumbent Pat Quinn and Republican challenger Bill Brady, according to recent Tribune/WGN polling. Democrat Alexi Giannoulias and Republican Mark Kirk are battling over the U.S. Senate seat in

The crowd applauds Saturday during a political rally at Hyde Park's Midway Plaisance. WILLIAM DESHAZER/TRIBUNE

HISTORY LESSON

The 2010 midterm elections follow a presidential election that had high youth voter turnout, like the 1994 and 2006 midterms following Presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush, respectively. Here's a look at voter turnout rates for adults ages 18 to 29. REDEYE

SOURCE: CENTER FOR INFORMATION & RESEARCH ON CIVIC LEARNING & ENGAGEMENT

NATIONWIDE TURNOUT

2006 | 26%

ILLINOIS TURNOUT

1994 | 23%

2006 | 23%

another tight race.

"Young people are notoriously apathetic toward politics. Obama was able to break that up with his charisma, but he's not on the ballot this year," said Richards, 23, of Lincoln Park.

Kyle Stone, Chicago Young Republicans executive board secretary, attributed the drop in interest in the midterm election to Obama supporters who aren't as enthusiastic.

The Harvard survey showed Millennials who identified themselves as Republicans seemed more interested in voting.

To see young voters come out, candidates had to appeal to more than party identification, said Cathy Cohen, a political science professor at the University of Chicago. The problem is that many candidates aren't engaging or directly speaking to young people about the issues they face, she said.

What could affect young voter turnout is that Millennials haven't developed the habit of voting, Andolina said. They also are more likely to have changed addresses, affecting their voter registration. Another obstacle, according to active young voters in Chicago: Midterm election coverage can feel overshadowed by coverage of the city's mayoral race in February.

What's at stake for young voters? To see policies in line with the choices they made at the polls in past elections carried out, experts said.

Young voters are motivated to go to the polls because of issues such as unemployment and student loan debt, and Obama is targeting them through appearances on shows such as "The Daily Show," said Emily Robinson, secretary of the Young Democrats of America.

But voter turnout won't be to the degree it was in 2008, she said.

"I think it's tough because there's a lot of races specifically in Illinois," said Robinson, 27, of Bucktown. "If you're not an educated voter, you wouldn't have any idea where the candidates stand on any issues."

'BEAUTIFUL AND SOARING'

SERVICE CELEBRATES LIFE OF NOTRE DAME STUDENT

Chicago Tribune

Hundreds celebrated the short, bright life of Declan Drumm Sullivan with Irish song and Catholic tradition Monday, five days after the 20-year-old died in South Bend, Ind., while videotaping a football practice at the University of Notre Dame.

Family members "have let go of fear and anger and emotions," said Sullivan's uncle, Michael Miley, who described the theme of the funeral service as one of letting go.

"It was beautiful and soaring," he said.

Notre Dame football coach Brian Kelly and two busloads of college students attended the funeral at St. Mary Catholic Church in Buffalo Grove, where Sullivan had gone to school as a child. He graduated from Carmel High School in Mundelein, which also sent a bus filled with students to the standing-room-only service.

Speakers included Sullivan's sister, a Notre Dame student, Miley said. The funeral also featured a choir and Irish performances, said Miley, the family spokesman. "We hope over the next few days, weeks and months that people in the community will heal as we are beginning to do," Miley said.

Sullivan of Long Grove was in a scissor lift recording video footage of a football practice during a strong wind advisory when the lift toppled onto the street.

Indiana's Occupational Safety and Health Administration said the death has been classified as a workplace fatality. Investigators will look into whether the lift was being operated safely, including whether it should have been used in 33 mph winds with gusts of 51 mph, officials have said.

Sullivan, a junior with a double major in marketing and film, enjoyed writing music reviews for Notre Dame's student newspaper. On Wednesday, he was working for the university's athletic department when taping the football practice.

Just before his death, he described the windy conditions on the lift as "terrifying" in tweets that he sent to friends.

"Declan was a very passionate kid when it came to media, when it came to telling stories," Miley said. "He died doing what he loved."

Blago hawks pistachios

Chicago Tribune

At least it's Snooki wearing the revealing green swimsuit and not Rod Blagojevich.

The ex-governor/convicted felon and the "Jersey Shore" star are among the celebrities tapped by Paramount Farms to star in a $20 million, six-week ad campaign touting Wonderful Pistachios. The Blagojevich ad made its debut during Sunday's World Series telecast.

It's Blagojevich's first turn as a celebrity endorser, and it's the first time L.A.-based Paramount Farms has hired a felon for its "Get Crackin'" marketing effort. The company sought out the ex-governor's services because it was looking for personalities who represent "every corner of the fabric of U.S. society," and didn't mind his conviction for lying to the FBI, said Dominic Engels, Paramount's vice president of marketing.

"He's experiencing a second life after governor," Engels said. "It wouldn't be fair to bar him from the American dream."

In the 15-second national spot, a man slides a briefcase across the table to Blagojevich, who gives the camera a knowing look and opens it to find an overflowing pile of pistachios, while the voiceover announcer states "Rod Blagojevich does it innocently."

Snow flurries in the forecast. Seriously.

Chicago Tribune

A 150 mph jet stream is expected to steer a cold front through the Chicago area this week—and maybe snow too.

The cold front should hit the middle of the week, driving lows in the Chicago area Thursday night to the low 30s, when rain mixed with snow is in the forecast, according to National Weather Service meteorologist Andrew Krein.

That would be the first trace of snow since April 8, Krein said. The last measurable snow in the Chicago area was March 20.

The cold front will pull air out of northern Canada across the western Great Lakes, according to the Chicago Weather Center.

"Cloudiness and instability showers will be created by the very cold air passing over the relatively warm land and surface waters of Lake Michigan," the weather center reports. "Snow will form with temperatures well below freezing less than 5,000 feet aloft, which could mix with rain hitting the ground."

Temperatures could be back in the upper 50s by Sunday, when daylight-saving time ends. The Chicago area usually gets its first trace of snow around Oct. 30, according to the weather service. The earliest a trace of snow has hit the record books was Sept. 25, 1942; the latest, Dec. 5, 1999.

Plotter in acid attack sentenced to 44 years

Chicago Tribune

Esperanza Medina bowed her head and wept in court Monday morning as a Cook County judge sentenced a Cicero woman to 44 years in prison for organizing an acid attack against her in 2008.

The assault with sulfuric acid burned a quarter of Medina's body and left the 50-year-old former social worker with red and white scars covering her face, neck, chest and arms.

A Criminal Court jury convicted Ofelia Garcia, 60, in September of three counts of heinous battery in connection with the attack.

"This crime was something that was cold and calculated," Judge Nicholas Ford said before handing down the sentence. "What [Garcia] did is terrible and deserves to be punished severely."

Garcia and her former daughter-in-law, Maria Olvera-Garcia, plotted the assault after Garcia's longtime boyfriend, Gustavo Alvarez, ended his relationship with both women in 2007 to live with Medina.

The pair then recruited three teenagers to carry out the attack, according to prosecutors.

The teens, who pleaded guilty to juvenile charges in exchange for their cooperation, testified at the trials of both women.

Olvera-Garcia also was found guilty and is scheduled to be sentenced Wednesday.

On Monday, Ofelia Garcia sat in a blue jail jumpsuit beside her attorney as she listened to an interpreter translate the proceedings into Spanish.

Before the sentencing, Medina's daughter, Lisette, read a statement her mother had written to the court.

The statement detailed what Medina has endured since the attack—the physical pain, the multiple skin grafts, the depression, the stares.

"I never thought my life would change so much in just seconds," wrote Medina, who had to move back into her 75-year-old mother's house following the attack. "I had so many dreams still to achieve, but they were broken down."

County releases suicide reports

Chicago Tribune

Few new details emerged Monday as Cook County finally released autopsy and other reports of the medical examiner's investigation into the high-profile suicides of Michael Scott and Christopher Kelly in 2009.

The documents were released months after the Tribune and other news outlets sought them under the Illinois Freedom of Information Act.

Scott, 60, president of the Chicago Board of Education and a close friend of Mayor Daley, was discovered dead of a self-inflicted gunshot wound Nov. 16 near a bridge on the Near North Side. Kelly, 51, a key fundraiser and close friend to former Gov. Rod Blagojevich who was facing prison time at the time of his death, was found in a southwest suburban lumber yard Sept. 12, 2009, with rat poison nearby. Toxicology reports, however, found he died of an overdose of pain medications.

According to the Scott report, he fell 15 feet from a ledge into a foot of water, and a .380-caliber handgun was recovered under his body. There also was a bullet in his pocket, but no note left behind, according to the documents.

The Scott investigation was controversial because Chicago police for a time refused to call the shooting a suicide—even after the medical examiner made that ruling.

Scott, who had gunshot residue on his left hand, suffered the gunshot wound in the left side of his head.

The Kelly report detailed his arrival at Oak Forest Hospital after his girlfriend found him slumped over the steering wheel in his vehicle. A doctor initially told police that Kelly "was OK but just needed to rest."

Kelly, 51, later died at Stroger Hospital.

Attorneys for the county had denied a request by the Tribune and other news media for the detailed medical examiner's reports of both deaths.

Under changes in the FOIA law, a newly created office of the state public access counselor considered the request as well. In early June, that office ruled that, except for postmortem photos, the reports should be released.

Official: Fewer police on the force next year

Chicago Tribune

A top Chicago city official on Monday confirmed what many aldermen have long said was true: Even with the planned hiring of new police officers, fewer will be on the force next year.

The city at the end of this year will have about 950 vacant police officer positions, said Gene Munin, the city's budget director. Although the city plans to hire 200 officers next year, it projects that 300 will leave the force.

Munin later conceded that the projection of 300 departures was not in keeping with historical patterns. Typically, about 450 officers retire or leave the force for other reasons each year, he said.

If the city has more money than expected available next year, it could hire more officers, he said. The Daley administration budgeted for 13,700 officers.

"Everybody in the city would like to have more police officers," Munin told aldermen at a City Council Finance Committee meeting. "The question is not, 'What do we want.' The questions is, 'What can we afford?'"

Munin addressed the issue as aldermen discussed asking voters via the Feb. 22 city ballot whether the city should fill all police officer positions in the budget. A decision on whether to do that was put off for another day.

Can Chiropractic Help Me?

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST?

We are often asked, "What's the best way of finding out whether or not a doctor of chiropractic can help my problem?"

We believe the answer can be found in a complete chiropractic consultation and examination, including x-rays.

And to help find out for sure, we will do a complete consultation and examination, including x-rays, if necessary, (procedures that normally cost $390 or more) for only $25.

We will make this special program available through November 11, 2010. The only exception to the offer involves personal injury cases (workers' compensation and auto accidents) in which there is no charge directly to the patient.

$25.00 Reg. $390 Value

Must present ad at time of appointment.

YOUR INITIAL VISIT WILL INCLUDE:

- A Private consultation with the doctor.
- X-rays, if necessary.
- A thorough spinal examination including orthopedic & neurological test.
- A confidential report of our findings.
- An explanation of our treatment procedure if we determine chiropractic can help you.
- A REFERRAL TO THE PROPER SPECIALIST IF WE DETERMINE CHIROPRACTIC CAN'T HELP YOU.

THESE CONDITIONS ARE SOME OF THE DANGER SIGNALS:

- Headache
- Arthritic pain by stiff neck
- Loss of sleep
- Scoliosis (Curvature of the spine)
- Leg pain & numbness
- Arm pain & numbness

Parcel bomb injures woman

1 One person was wounded Monday when a parcel bomb exploded at a private courier company in Greece, according to the nation's Public Order Ministry. Two suspects were arrested after police cordoned off the surrounding area, the ministry said.

Judge: No love notes

2 In a rare diversion during a murder case that has seen heart-wrenching testimony, a Connecticut judge on Monday chastised a juror for passing a note to a court marshal asking him for a date. Judge Jon Blue told the alternate juror he is "a romantic at heart," but not in the courtroom, and said sending the note was a "goddamn dumb thing to do."

5 A school district member in Arkansas who came under fire for an anti-gay post on Facebook formally submitted his resignation to the school board Monday, according to the Midland School District superintendent. The board unanimously voted to accept.

Court upholds 'DADT' ruling

6 A federal appeals court sided with the government Monday, allowing the military to maintain its "don't ask, don't tell" policy during an appeal of a lower court ruling that the law barring openly gay and lesbian soldiers is unconstitutional.

The Canadian government has agreed to accept Guantanamo detainee Omar Khadr after he finishes a year of incarceration in U.S. custody, a spokeswoman for the Canadian Ministry of Foreign Affairs said.

"The American government agreed for Omar Khadr to return to Canada. We will implement the agreement between Omar Khadr and the U.S. government," said Melissa Lantsman, spokeswoman for the Canadian ministry.

Khadr agreed to plead guilty to murder and other charges in exchange for a sentence of eight years, far less than the 40 years the military commission sentenced him to over the weekend. Part of the agreement was that he would be transferred to Canada to complete

THE DETAINEE

Omar Khadr, a 24-year-old Canadian citizen, is the youngest detainee held at the detention facility at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. He pleaded guilty last week to murder, attempted murder, providing material support for terrorism, spying and conspiracy. Khadr admitted to throwing a grenade during a 2002 firefight in Afghanistan that killed Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Speer, a member of a U.S. Army Special Forces unit. Khadr was 15 at the time.

Under rules of Canada's National Parole Board, Khadr could be eligible for parole after serving one-third of his sentence and could be released after serving two-thirds of the seven years, according to information sent out by the U.S. Department of Defense.

A key issue was whether Khadr was a willing participant in fighting American forces, or if he was involved because it was the course set by his father.

"Khadr admitted that prior to and during the firefight, he had the opportunity to safely leave but chose to stay and fight against the American and coalition forces. He admitted building and planting 10 land mines, intending to kill as many Americans as possible," said a statement from the U.S. Department of Defense, announcing Khadr's sentence.

Does an active social life mean more sleepy time?

Do your personality and social life say something about the way you sleep? According to a new study in the journal Sleep, patterns of sleep can be based on the kind of social activities we partake in, and the type of people we are.

The study results showed that people who were outgoing, or extroverts, who were exposed to 12 hours of social interaction, were more vulnerable to being sleepy than those extroverts who participated in 12 hours of isolated activity.

Response tests showed that extroverts who had great social lives were slower in the early hours of the day, as well as noon time, compared with extroverts who were by themselves.

For those who were less outgoing, or the introverts, their response tests were unaffected and remained stable no matter what their activities.

N.Y. RANGERS 3, BLACKHAWKS 2

Shot blocked

Hawks can't put enough pucks past N.Y. defense

Chicago Tribune

NEW YORK The Rangers set up a road block and the Blackhawks did everything but attempt to drive the Zamboni through it.

After peppering New York goaltender Henrik Lundqvist with 35 shots and firing 33 more that Rangers players sacrificed their bodies to block, the Hawks departed Madison Square Garden on Monday night with a disappointing 3-2 defeat.

"When you have a team that's fearless, they're going to get in front of shots like that," Hawks center Jonathan Toews said. "We took our fair share of shots from the point, which is a good thing. We want to keep doing that."

Maybe another time it will work, but it didn't Monday as the Rangers filled the shooting lanes and Lundqvist was up to the task on all but two pucks that did reach him to drop the Hawks' record to 7-6-1. Brandon Dubinsky scored two goals and Erik Christensen got the game-winner for the Rangers. The Hawks had scores from Tomas Kopecky and Patrick Kane and a solid effort by goalie Marty Turco, but it wasn't enough.

When the Hawks did score, they allowed New York to return the favor with timely goals. After Kopecky's goal late in the first gave the Hawks the lead and momentum, Dubinsky tied it 2 minutes, 26 seconds later as the clock ticked down to 21 seconds remaining in the period.

Dubinsky then made it 2-1 New York early in the second before Kane scored to pull the Hawks even. Again, the Rangers struck quickly as Christensen scored 28 seconds later.

"We had momentum and then they get that goal late in the first and it just kills all of our momentum going into the break," said Hawks defenseman Duncan Keith, who had 12 shots blocked by the Rangers. "And then we tie it up in the third and they score the next shift. That's two goals that we can't give up and we have to be better in the last minute and the first shift after we score."

BLACKHAWKS INJURIES

The Blackhawks have been dealing with injuries all season. Here's a rundown.

» Brian Campbell: Played first game of season Monday after injuring a medial collateral ligament in his right knee during the preseason. He missed four weeks. "[My knee] feels pretty good. You're going to have pain for a little while but I was comfortable with it," he said. "Each day I got better and better and I was amazed how much better I got."

» Marian Hossa: The red-hot Hossa will be out a couple of weeks with an upper-body injury. He was leading the team in goals when he went out.

» Dave Bolland: Out at least this week with what is suspected to be a rib injury. "It's not a concern; it's short term," General Manager Stan Bowman said. "I'm not positive he'll be back [Saturday] but ... it's nothing we're worried about." REDEYE, TRIBUNE

Moss would grow on Chicago

When Minnesota waived Randy Moss on Monday, I had to read my computer screen three times to make sure it wasn't a typo.

Why did Minnesota let go of Moss after trading for him a month earlier? I do not care. We have to get him in a Bears uniform. I will drive up Interstate 94 to Minny myself to pick him up in my Sebring. If he wants, I'll even take him to the Wisconsin Dells' finest indoor water parks on the way back.

The Vikes are toast. Brett Favre's jaw is fractured in as many places as his marriage. At 2-5, they're as good as 2-14. The Bears have already beaten the Packers once, and the Lions are still the Lions. The NFC North is up for grabs, and Moss will make the difference between a division title and a 7-9 season.

Jay Cutler gets roundly criticized for recklessly tossing jump balls into double-, triple- or even septuple-coverage. Who's the best wideout in the history of NFL at catching reckless jump balls? Randy Effing Moss.

It wouldn't matter if our line can't block anyone anymore. The Quigley Tecmo Jump Ball Offense(TM) is foolproof if you've got No. 84 on your team. Every single play will result in either A) a catch for a big chunk of yards B) a defensive pass interference call C) a harmless incomplection or D) a deep interception. And we already get "D" four times per game, people!

Go get Randy, Mr. Angelo. I don't care if there are 17 other teams ahead of us on the waiver wire. Cheat. Lie. Tell Cincinnati, "Hey, look over there," then cut in line. Sleep with the appropriate brass from Seattle. Make it happen.

And Mr. Martz, put your ego aside and start running the QTJBO immediately. I want majestic 55-yard bombs floating in the Lake Michigan breeze on every single play for the rest of the season. Be a visionary. You might even convert a third down.

1 What's really wrong with Brett Favre's ankle?	It has to be a case of Imadeahugemistakeitis.	It's laughably small. Oh, you said ankle. No idea.	Jenn Sterger's attorney is sticking needles in the "Favre" voodoo doll.	He's an attention-grubbing diva. Do we not understand this by now?	He rolled it tripping over his pants while taking pictures of himself.
2 How can Tiger Woods regain his No. 1 world golf ranking?	Ceasing to act like Brett Favre would be a start.	Stop muffing the birdies.	Put a picture of Elin on his golf ball each tournament.	Wow, is there anything suitable for print that can be a response to this question?	By focusing only on his No. 1 mistress.
3 Paul Konerko signing with the Arizona Diamondbacks would be like Allen Iverson playing in Turkey.	... a team called the "Arizona Diamondbacks" winning the World Series. Never gonna happen.	... like ketchup on a hot dog —just not right.	... if Don Mattingly signed with the Marlins. Except Konerko has a World Series ring.	... being demoted from the White Sox to Charlotte.
4 What's tougher than staying unbeaten in college football?	Convincing the Bears' offensive line to block someone.	Staying unbeaten in college.	Staying No. 1. Watch out, Oregon.	Pretending to care about college football while living in a college town.	The players doing their homework—by themselves.
5 What can the Blackhawks do to compensate for their injuries?	I hear Randy Moss is available ...	Carry around a giant drinking vessel.	Try Brett Favre's prescription of Vicodin and beer. It works every time.	They can't. If only the NHL had an 82-game season and more than half the teams made the playoffs.	Have Marty Turco center the second line and keep Corey Crawford in goal.

BULLS 110, TRAIL BLAZERS 98

Bulls forward scores career-high 40 points

Ninety minutes before tipoff, Luol Deng reclined on the locker-room floor, watching some film, not a care in the world.

"I'm not happy about my start offensively," Deng said. "But I'm also not worried because I know it will come around."

On Monday night at the United Center, Deng dazzled in the Bulls' 110-98 victory over previously undefeated Portland.

From the moment an active Deng stole a pass from Andre Miller and scored on a fast break early to the last of his career-high 40 points, the senior Bull put to rest questions about his slow start.

Following a stellar preseason, Deng played well defensively through the Bulls' first two games but struggled with 30 percent shooting and had averaged just 11 points. Monday night, Deng hit his first five shots and finished 14-for-19 from the field.

"I like this offense, and I work too hard for my game not to come around," Deng said before the game. "I just need to find my rhythm. ... The offense will come."

The Bulls recorded their second straight victory behind a deep effort in which all 11 players who received time scored.

Omer Asik played well for the second straight game to finish with six points, seven rebounds and three blocks before fouling out. In his most active game, Kyle Korver added 11 points to prop up a sagging bench.

Old standbys Derrick Rose and Joakim Noah did their double-double thing; Rose had 16 points and 13 assists while Noah chipped in 10 points and 10 boards.

Johnson, Asik rewarded with playing time

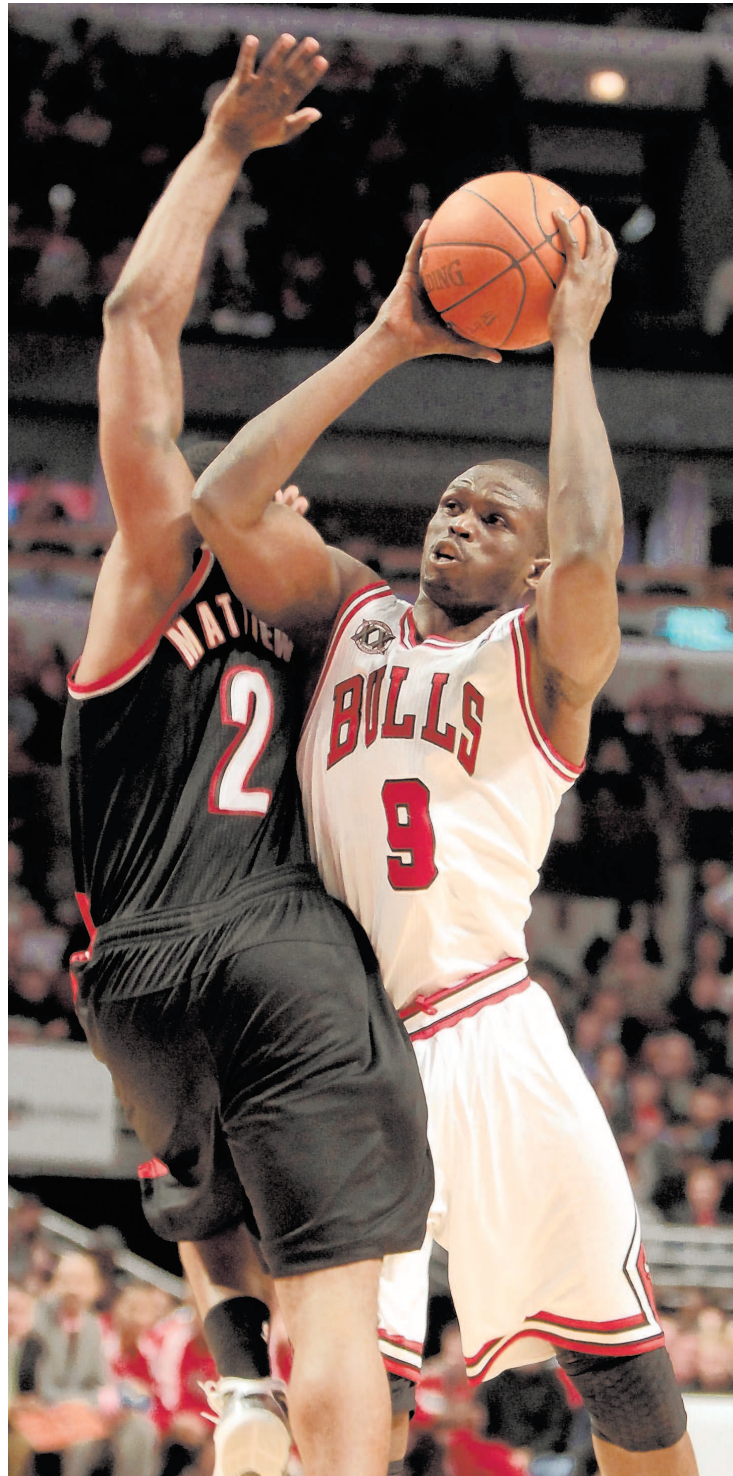

Bulls coach Tom Thibodeau channeled his inner Lovie Smith on Monday night when asked about his rotation, which became a lot more crowded following unexpectedly strong performances from James Johnson and Omer Asik on Saturday.

"We're still evaluating, and we'll go from there," Thibodeau said, using one of the Bears coach's favorite phrases.

Thibodeau used 11 players in the first half alone, but he backed his words that strong play will be rewarded by using Asik and Johnson off the bench first.

That pushed Ronnie Brewer further down in the rotation and limited starting shooting guard Keith Bogans' minutes. Both have struggled offensively.

"The big thing for them is to continue to defend, execute, take open shots," Thibodeau said. "Right now, the ball isn't going in. But it will."

Bulls forward Luol Deng drives to the basket around Portland's Wesley Matthews during the fourth quarter Monday at the United Center.

NOVEMBER SURVIVAL GUIDE

29 ways to get down and gobble up this month

By Rebecca Palmore

The heat is on for the holidays. There's shopping to do, winter beers to survey and parties to hit (and miss). With a little planning and a few creative excuses to duck out of work early, you can carve out plenty of time for festive diversions. Find more ways to entertain yourself, and introduce your crew to just-opened bars and restaurants, at metromix.com.

7 See examples of art brut, visionary art and more mouthfuls at the Intuit show of Folk and Outsider Art (Nov. 5-7) at Navy Pier (600 E. Grand Ave.) presented as part of SOFA.

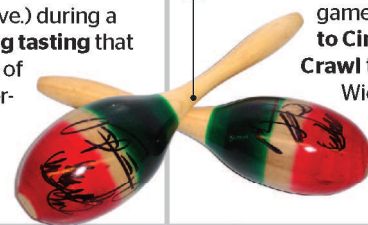

8 Go nuts for Coco! "Conan" airs tonight on TBS on a TV near you.

9 See the local premiere of "Celia: The Queen," a doc about salsa Celia Cruz (above), part of Chicago Latino Fashion Week (Nov. 8-15). AMC Loews Pipers Alley, 1608 N. Wells St.

3 Toast Lakeview drinking institution Sheffield's (3258 N. Sheffield Ave.) during a Smuttynose Brewing tasting that kicks off two months of the bar's 30th anniversary festivities.

4 Think spring—it'll come back, we promise—at Drink Deck's game-fueled Halfway to Cinco de Mayo Bar Crawl to three spots in Wicker Park, ending at The Fifty/50, 2047 W. Division St.

10 Point your toes toward Lakeview's Stage 773 (1225 W. Belmont Ave.) for opening night of Dance Chicago 2010. This year's fest features 300-plus works by 3,000 dancers. Through Nov. 21.

11 Watch a raucous battle of good vs. evil at Lucha Vavoom, the wildly entertaining Mexican wrestling show with a hefty side of burlesque and comedy. Park West, 322 W. Armitage Ave.

14 Tailgate in Wicker Park at the Warm Up and Bear Down Chili Cook-Off, featuring all-you-can-eat chili from 16 contestants vying for $500. Bring two coats: One to donate, one to wear. The event takes place in the parking lot at Moonshine, 1824 W. Division St.

15 Save the date for the little reading series that could: Essay Fiesta, the brainchild of local writers Keith Ecker and Alyson Lyon, celebrates its first anniversary at The Book Cellar, 4736-38 N. Lincoln Ave.

16 Salute a classic Chicago dish at the Pizza Film Festival of pie-themed shorts while stuffing your face with the featured food, courtesy of Chicago's Pizza. Hungry Brain, 2319 W. Belmont Ave.

17 Learn how to make eight types of potato pancakes at Latke-palooza: One for Each Night, with resident exec chef Laura Frankel at the Spertus Institute of Jewish Studies, 610 S. Michigan Ave.

18 Don't go out on a limb for your holiday fix. The Tree of Lights Ceremony on the Mag Mile offers live music before the big switch flip. John Hancock Building and Observatory, 875 N. Michigan Ave.

21 Put your best foot forward for the final preliminary round (also Nov. 7 and 14) of the Salsa Open Dance Contest for a shot at the $3,000 grand prize Dec. 5. Cubby Bear, 1059 W. Addison St.

22 Shake loose of your responsible, reserved self and get down and dirty at the weekly Porn and Chicken Dance Party at Evil Olive, 1551 W. Division St.

23 Attend the third annual Road to Fame singing finals at Mahoney's Pub & Grill (551 N. Ogden Ave.) to see who reigns supreme.

28 Score crafty gifts you never knew you wanted until spying them at the DIY-loving Bucktown Bazaar (Saturday-Sunday) at the Holstein Park Fieldhouse, 2200 N. Oakley Ave.

29 Plan a discreet office nap after a lunch of brats and hot spiced wine at the 15th annual German bazaar Christkindlmarket Chicago (Nov. 24-Dec. 24) in Daley Plaza, 50 W. Washington St.

30 Share "secrets," this month's theme at true storytelling series The Moth StorySLAM with local cutup Brian Babylon. Martyrs', 3855 N. Lincoln Ave.

24 Throw back $3 shots of Wild Turkey before the real deal (tomorrow) at the Black Cat Wednesday party at Fat Cat, 4840 N. Broadway.

25 Sweat out Black Wednesday booze in preparation for Thanksgiving dinner at Turkey Trot 8K Run and Walk. Start: Fullerton Parkway and Cannon Drive.

Lower Back Pain?

Are You or Someone You Know Suffering From Lower Back Pain?

Northwestern University is seeking volunteers who have lower back pain in order to determine where the pain is recognized in the brain. Participants will also be evaluated to determine why pain goes away for some people while it remains for others. This is a 12 month study consisting of 1 visit at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and 5 MRI scans at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Olson Pavilion. All visits will take place in downtown Chicago.

Eligible participants must:

- Be 18 years or older
- Have a history of lower back pain which began 4-16 weeks ago with pain radiating into the buttocks or legs
- Be able to undergo a MRI (no pacemakers, metallic implants, or spinal implants)

Please call 312-503-3181 for more information on how you can take part in this research study.

Jon Hamm's smooth moves

Just so we're clear, he's not REALLY Don Draper

By Dana Moran | RedEye

Jon Hamm racked up his third "Saturday Night Live" appearance last weekend, including an opening monologue in which he tried to use his skills as Don Draper from "Mad Men" to come up with advertising pitches ... and they kinda sucked. Despite our fondest wishes, Jon Hamm is not actually Don Draper. Here's how the real-life Hamm stacks up against his hottie TV alter ego. (Warning: If you are not up to date on "Mad Men," there are spoilers ahead.)

In his former life, Don Draper ...

... was poor farm boy Dick Whitman. He stole a dead soldier's identity during the Korean War and began living as Draper.

Draper's family...

... consists of his ex-wife, Betty, and their three children, Sally, Bobby and Gene. He just proposed to his secretary, Megan, so she could be wife No. 2 by the time Season 5 rolls around.

When it comes to grooming, Draper ...

... has every hair in place, each button buttoned and his tie perfectly tied. The only time you'll see him disheveled is if he's been getting into a drunken scuffle, or doing some drunken upchucking.

During his relaxation time, Draper ...

... woos women, writes in his journal and woos women. He's also recently taken up swimming, probably after realizing that a life of cigarettes and bourbon is getting him nowhere in the longevity department.

In his former life, Jon Hamm ...

... was a high school drama teacher in St. Louis. Ellie Kemper from "The Office" was one of his students, and she told The AV Club "it was like having a hunk in the class."

Hamm's family ...

... consists of his longtime partner, Jennifer Westfeldt, whom he's dated for more than 10 years. "We may not have a piece of paper that says we're husband and wife, but after 10 years, Jennifer is more than just a girlfriend," he told the New York Post.

When it comes to grooming, Hamm ...

... has a tendency to grow a beard during his "Mad Men" hiatus. It's not a look we love.

During his relaxation time, Hamm ...

... likes to golf and play tennis, he told USA Today. He told People magazine he's a big fan of the St. Louis Blues and the Cardinals—and no, he doesn't smoke. The cigs on set are herbal.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor & Statistics predicts faster-than-average job growth for psychology professionals, with the 10-year growth rate expected to be double-digit for psychologists and for counselors. This growth, among the highest of all professions, is driven by the need for services in non-traditional settings such as social service agencies, substance abuse treatment clinics, schools, hospitals.

End of another marriage

The latest news from the Charlie Sheen machine isn't exactly shocking: The “Two and a Half Men” star has filed for divorce from Brooke Mueller, according to eonline.com. Sheen, who was hospitalized last week after a hotel room meltdown, was arrested last Christmas after a domestic dispute with Mueller.

‘Glee’ for grown-ups

Thirty-three million page views in one week will make anyone gleeful. After drawing that many hits for its racy “Glee” photo shoot, GQ magazine will release behind-the-scenes video featuring Lea Michele, Cory Monteith and Dianna Agron online, according to hollywoodreporter.com.

Here come the bleeps

Kid Rock is ready to get roasted. The rocker will celebrate his 40th birthday Jan. 17 as the subject of a Comedy Central roast at Detroit’s Fox Theatre, billboard.com reports. Kid Rock also has plans to throw a birthday concert at Ford Field, which will be renamed “Forty Field” in honor of his big day, the site reports.

“I’ve always liked older men. They’re just more attractive to me. Of course, at my age there aren’t that many left!”

— Betty White, who is 88, to Parade about her dating habits

“I’ll tell you what you can expect: a Cream of Wheat-ish texture on the upper thighs, from knee to belly button, I would say in all honesty. And a misshapen upper thigh that actually is not misshapen because there’s probably more [in the world] like it than not, but it doesn’t look good in jeans.”

— Sarah Silverman to New York magazine, tempering expectations for her nude scene in the upcoming film “Take This Waltz”
